BK FINEST NATURAL WIGS
By Braindy Kaminer

Dina Blau 07976 629 693

Summer's here and we all know you want to get out of the kitchen! Presenting your family's new favorite all-in-one dish that's ready in minutes. When your hungry clan is exhausted from the outdoor fun and clamoring for food, we've got you covered- with crispy Potato Puffs smothered in a smooth, creamy cheese sauce. This dish disappears quickly so feel free to double or triple the recipe. Forks en garde!

Cheesy Potato Puffs Casserole

1 bag B'gan Potato Puffs

¼ c. olive oil

⅛ c. butter

3 ½ tsp. flour

1 c. whole milk

¾ c. shredded mozzarella cheese

¾ c. shredded cheddar cheese

½ tsp. kosher salt

Pinch of black pepper

4 B'gan Frozen Garlic Cubes

2 B'gan Frozen Basil Cubes

2 tsp. oregano

Dried parsley & smoked paprika for garnish

Preheat oven to 450° F. Add Potato Puffs to a sheet tray and brush with olive oil. Bake for 25 minutes, flipping halfway through, until golden crisp.

Meanwhile, make cheese sauce: Melt butter in a medium pot. Whisk in flour and cook for about 1 minute; add a splash of milk, then whisk until smooth. Continue cooking on medium flame, adding milk and whisking slowly and constantly. Add half the shredded cheeses, salt, pepper, B'gan Garlic and Basil Cubes and oregano. Whisk until smooth. Taste and adjust the seasoning as necessary.

When Potato Puffs are done, place one layer of Puffs in 9-inch round glass Pyrex dish. Pour half of the cheese sauce evenly over the Puffs, then add second layer of Puffs and pour remaining cheese sauce over it. Bake at 350° F until cheese is melted (approximately 20 minutes). Garnish with parsley and smoked paprika.

Legal advice

That's why landlords choose us for a thorough, professional service.

If your tenant is consistently in arrears, causing problems or has an expired Tenancy Agreement which you don't want to renew, you have the right to evict. However, evicting tenants requires a lot of legal expertise and knowledge, due to complicated and constantly changing legislation.

At Reclaim, we will take care of all the details with utmost professionalism and confidentiality, facilitating the complex process from start to finish.

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

"Home time, please," Peter begged. "I can't see straight."

"Yes, I think we deserve it," agreed Colin. "I have some thinking to do anyhow. You and I have been on the go since about eight this morning, haven't we? Starting with the Hardmans' workplace, ending with picking up Miss Cleverclogs from New York. Quite a day, eh, Peter?" He looked at his watch. It was midnight. "Let's go home."

Colin shut the door of his apartment by leaning on it and groaned with the pain of his aching limbs. He stretched, hearing some satisfying cracks, kicked off his shoes, and walked into the kitchen to make himself something to eat and drink. He made a toasted cheese sandwich and a large mug of tea, carried it to the small living room, and sat in his favorite armchair.

Placing his sandwich and tea on the coffee table, he leaned back in the chair and closed his eyes. A minute later, he was asleep.

He awoke with a start an hour later. His sandwich was stone cold, the toasted cheese like a slice of rubber, and there was a layer of gray scum floating in his tea. Bleary-eyed, he went back into the kitchen, trashed the sandwich, poured the tea down the sink, and made a fresh batch of both.

Carrying his new meal back into the living room, he sat down again, this time feeling slightly refreshed, and ate and drank.

He thought about the Hardman case. He got out his notebook and started writing. What did he have?

Possible motive: revenge.

For what? Could it be Cindy Wallis?

Unlikely but possible, if she was better than he thought. Certainly Cindy had been mysteriously missing for quite a while now. The trace evidence pointed to the abductor having been somewhere else other than the Hardman front yard before the kidnaping. That was up to Cleverclogs to work out. He'd be interested in what she came up with.

Then there was the Internet side of things. That pesky Baruch Weiss had something up his sleeve, some supergeek or other. If he couldn't do a search to really mess things up, he was going to do it with the geek instead. Colin started to worry. He had been so busy brushing off Weiss like an annoying fly that he hadn't given any thought to what he might get up to behind his back. He made a note in capitals: CHECK OUT WEISS.

As he lifted himself out of his armchair, he noticed the red light blinking on his answering machine. He had been so tired before he had disregarded it. He got up and went over to it to play the messages.

Beep. A young voice. "Hello, this is Mikey Mendelsohn checking in. I might have something for ya, Chief. Call me back after school tomorrow." And a number.

Beep. Another young voice, slower, more hesitant than Mikey's. "This is Moishie Brandt. I remembered something else about the man, but I don't want to tell you over the phone. Mum says maybe you could meet me outside school tomorrow?" Beep. "End of messages."

Colin stood there grinning. Both boys on the same day. Amazing. Maybe he would get some breaks after all.

Then the room started swaying, and he walked unsteadily to the bedroom, where he crashed into oblivion.
