EASYJET DATA BREACH COMPENSATION

You could be eligible for up to £2000 or more, depending upon your individual circumstances.

EasyJet announced on the 19th May, 2020 that sensitive personal data of 9 million travellers had been exposed in a data breach. Despite notifying the UK's Information Commissioner's Office of the breach in January 2020, EasyJet waited four months to notify its customers.

The sensitive personal data leaked includes full names, email addresses and most disturbingly of all, travel data including departure dates, arrival dates and booking dates. In particular, the exposure of details of individuals' personal travel patterns may pose security risks to individuals and is a gross invasion of privacy.

Under Article 82 of the EU General Data Protection Regulation (EU-GDPR) you have a right to compensation for inconvenience, distress, annoyance and loss of control of your data.

Why Claim?

DATA SECURITY

Had EasyJet to account for inadequately ensuring data security.

FINANCIAL GAIN

If eligible, you could receive thousands of pounds or euros in compensation.

Mesachta Shabbos Awaits You

Learn It. Chazer It. Own It!

On Shabbos Parshas Korach, June 27th, hundreds of Oraysa participants from around the world will proclaim, Hadran Alach Masechta Brachos Vebadrach Alan! We will return to you Masechta Brachos and you shall return to us!

This familiar, intimate farewell greeting to a masechta upon completion will have special significance for these lomdim, who, over the past six months, developed a personal bond with Masechta Brachos, learning and absorbing it amud after amud, many of them with daily and weekly chasaras and optional monthly bechinos. They are now coming away with a lifelong affinity and attachment to the opening tractate of Torah Sheb'al Peb!

Indeed, there is another translation to the words Hadran Alach Vebadrach Alan that is equally apropos – Masechta Brachos, your splendor remains with us and our splendor shall remain with you, forever!

The Oraysa program, an initiative for a daily Amud V'chasara, launched immediately after the 13th Siyum Hashas, this past winter. Klal Yisroel came away from that momentous celebration of accomplishment with a clear message. Not only does one need to have a daily learning seder but one also needs to have a strategic goal that motivates him day in day out.

That very Sunday, January 5th, scores of chaburos, chavrusos, and individuals in communities around the world set out on a journey with a united goal of learning and retaining Shas through a methodical and realistic program. Participants would learn one new amud each day, Sunday thru Thursday, along with a thorough chasara of the previous day's amud. Friday and Shabbos would be reserved for chazering the week's two-and-a-half blatt.

Oraysa has become a household name, warmly embraced by lomdim from the full spectrum of the Olam Hatorah, including balebattim, mechanchim, and yungeleit in Kollel. Now, six months later, they celebrate the vision behind the program which has been born out in their long-term retention of the masechta.

The program provides a plethora of resources, including daily audio and video shiurim, marei mekomos and review sheets, and the popular, interactive Rischa D'Oraysa Q&A's, sent daily to participants via email. All resources can be accessed anytime from anywhere, via the website, www.oraysa.org.

In addition, a monthly optional bechina is given every fourth Sunday on the ten blatt learned over the course of the month. The bechina is a critical tool for testing and promoting retention, motivating participants to do an additional, pre-bechina review at the end of each month.

Oraysa also provides support for setting up local shiurim, chaburos, chavrusos, and more. The handy, easy-to-use calendar produced by Oraysa provides a clear outline of the program and one's ongoing progress throughout. A custom calendar can be created and maintained by creating a login account on the website.

The start of Mesechta Shabbos is an opportunity to join this initiative and acquire this fundamental masechta for life. As is well known, an encompassing familiarity with the sugyos of Masechta Shabbos is crucial to understanding many of the relevant halachos. This is your opportunity to acquire it through a proven learning framework that works!

Oraysa has the strong endorsement and enthusiastic encouragement of leading Roshei Yeshiva, Rabbonim and Gedolei Yisroel, who issued strong statements of support for this learning model. The project is under the auspices of Harav Noach Isaac Oelbaum shlit'a, Rav of Khal Nachlas Yitzchok in Queens.

For more information or to set up or join a shiur or chaburah in your neighborhood, please contact Oraysa at 07938624792 or email UK@oraysa.org

Your Questions Answered CORONAVIRUS Memo 14

Q: My son was suffering from severe social anxiety which affected his attendance in cheder as well as his social standing. After contacting Zeh Lozeh, I was amazed at this hidden gem within the kehilla. You took care of everything – my son received professional help in a Torah'dig environment, you liaised directly with the school to smooth out some difficulties and have been there every step of the way. My son is now thriving and is doing very well even throughout the challenges of Covid-19 and beyond. When a close friend of mine enquired as to what caused this unbelievable change, I told her about Zeh Lozeh's work, she said that she had no idea that Zeh Lozeh does so much. Why don't you advertise all these wonderful services?

Answer: Firstly thank you for your kind words, the work we do is not easy and each success story gives us chizuk, we wish your son much hatzlacha and siyatta dishmaya further. You raise a valid point which has been asked by many others who have benefitted from our services. The answer lies within your question. We provide professional help in a Torah'dig environment. This means that the work we do is completely confidential and therefore 'what happens here stays here'. Furthermore, judging by the amount of calls we receive, people know that we are here and ready to help. We are B'H well connected with Rabbonim, Professionals, School Leaders and Sencos, who know they can access help, support or training when needed. For the benefit of our readers we will give a brief overview of the work we do.

Therapy – At our offices we have a dedicated team of male and female registered therapists with some specialising in particular types of therapy all under supervision. This bespoke team allows us to provide therapy that is tailor made to suit each person's needs. After an initial assessment, therapy can begin and is done in blocks of 20 sessions after which it is reviewed.

Training – We have trained close to 60 therapists from within the kehilla with separate courses for men and women.

Insets – With a selection of topics ranging from 'creating a positive school environment' to 'understanding children's emotional needs' schools can choose which Inset their school could benefit from. All Insets can be delivered in Yiddish or English and with the male or female presenter of your choice.

School Therapists – Many of our therapists work within a school setting. This is a fabulous way of providing children with a safe place as well as the session having minimal disruption to the pupil's day.

School Programmes and Support – Our comprehensive ABC Anti-Bullying Campaign programme is an excellent example of a programme where teamwork between Zeh Lozeh and the School Leaders can produce outstanding results. Here we provide staff training, pupil workshops for primary and secondary schools, as well as follow up and monthly consultations.

Monthly Meeting for Menaholim – This forum allows Menaholim to meet, receive specialised training on relevant and important topics from Professionals and Mechanchim.

Resources – We provide schools with resources on emotional health and wellbeing. Our recent successful launch of the free series of seven Zevi and Miri books in Yiddish and English were very well received.

Helpline – Calls to our helpline are answered by professional therapists, handled sensitively and discreetly and are completely confidential. We welcome any query for all ages on emotional health.

We pride ourselves in our ethos of providing our Choshove Kehilla with professional therapy and training that is on the Torah'dig standards you have come to expect from us. It goes without saying of course that all of our work has Rabbinical endorsement.

Call the Zeh Lozeh Helpline on 0203 728 4323 כל ישראל ערבים זה לזה – Because we really do care.

Please note that these answers are general guidelines. Each individual should consult with their Doctor/Moreh Derech.

Zeh Lozeh was set up in order to support emotional health within the community. Since its inception in 2016 Zeh Lozeh has impacted thousands of families, schools and children through raising awareness, insets and trainings, therapy and advice line.

Zeh Lozeh has the Haskomos of local and international Rabbonim as well as the endorsement of leading professionals.

☎ 0203 728 4323 ✉ zehlozehresolve@gmail.com 📍 Timberwharf Road London N16

Newsheet invites readers to submit any question to zehlozehresolve@gmail.com which will be answered by Rabbonim, Mechanchim and Professionals.

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

"How you feeling, son?"

"Wobbly." That said it all.

There was so much they were longing to ask him about his ten days in captivity. So many thoughts had gone through their minds, so many terrifying what if's. But they had been told by the hospital psychologist on admission that he would probably need counseling for a while, and that the full story would emerge, but it must be allowed to emerge at its own pace and only when Josh was ready to tell it. In the meantime, their task was to give him unconditional love, to make sure he knew that his absence from home was not his fault and that no blame was laid at his door. How could she blame him for what happened? Ilana had protested to the psychologist, but the kindly woman had explained that this is how he might perceive it.

"Sometimes, even subconsciously, blame is apportioned to the blameless. Saying things like 'You shouldn't have played outside on your own,' 'You mustn't talk to strangers anymore' — all this sends a message to the abducted child that makes him feel he could have avoided the incident through his own actions and therefore is to blame for what occurred. All children have the right to a certain amount of safe freedom. We can't wrap our kids up in cotton wool twenty-four/seven. What happened to Josh was not his fault. He was at the mercy of a very determined psychopath, and it was unlikely any action, either yours or his, could have prevented the abduction."

It had been a long night. Josh was admitted and formalities attended to. Then he was gently bathed and examined by a pediatrician. He seemed to be, on the surface at least, suffering from no more than mild malnutrition and dehydration and a few bruises and lacerations that were probably due to struggles during his captivity rather than any deliberate act of violence. Once the examination was complete, the nasogastric tube was set up, much to Josh's consternation, and a high protein liquid feed sent down it. Another needle, in a vein in his hand, dripped glucose solution directly into his bloodstream. He was then tucked up in bed, and Ilana sat with him until almost dawn, watching his eyelids droop into sleep even as he looked at her.

"Why do I have to have all these tubes, Mummy? They hurt," he whispered.

"It's because you need feeding up and fluids," Ilana explained.

"I was always hungry and thirsty in the roof," he admitted. "They gave me things to eat and drink sometimes, but not always when I wanted. And it got so hot in there in the daytime."

Ilana could not imagine the place in which her son had been held prisoner and did not want to try.

"Did he die, Mummy?"

"Yes, he died. Now shush, darling, and go to sleep. He's dead and he won't bother you anymore."

As his eyelids closed, he murmured, "Cindy was nice sometimes. She gave me toys and kosher nosh, and Coca-Cola, even when he said I couldn't have any. Where is Cindy, Mummy?"

"Go to sleep, darling."

Now he regarded her sleepily. "I'm so glad you're here, Mummy. I missed you. I knew you must be so worried, but they wouldn't let me phone you to let you know I was okay. You always told me to phone you if I was out for longer than you said and let you know where I was. But he wouldn't let me. I'm sorry, Mummy. I didn't mean to be bad." "Oh, Josh." Ilana's eyes filled with tears. "You weren't bad. You did nothing wrong. That bad man stopped you from phoning me, that's all. It wasn't your fault."

Josh nodded, satisfied, and drifted off again. Ilana was so tired. She thought she would never feel awake again. But her whole body was suffused with such joy and contentment that the feeling of tiredness was not negative, but a good feeling, like a manual laborer might feel after a job done well. She would face his questions about Cindy when she felt stronger.

Around her, the hospital, which never fully sleeps, was coming to life.

At the theater, Leora was busy collecting evidence. She found a small area of wasteland at the rear of the theater from which Gabriel had made his entrances and exits to the stage attic. This wasteland grew a profusion of wildflowers and entomological corpses and would prove to be, through forensic palynology, the source of the pollen spores and dead insects Leora had taken from Josh's windowsill. She had also found traces of this soil in the roof space where the Fox had kept Josh.

Colin crouched grimly at the entrance to the roof space, looking at Josh's prison. There was no window in the shelter. When the wooden slats were in place, only the spaces in-between allowed any air or daylight to come through. Artificial light was supplied by a low-voltage battery-charged lamp, which glowed dimly in a corner. Other than that, there was a stained mattress covered in a tartan blanket and a baby's potty. The darkness of the place, and the smell, was indescribable.

"Oh, here's something else," Colin said, reaching in with a gloved hand. He drew out a small oblong box. It was a color Gameboy.

"The poor kid," Leora said, bagging it. "He couldn't possibly have seen well enough in this light to play with it. And it was the only amusement he had in here."

"What a dreadful place to keep a kid," Peter said, shaking his head sadly.

"At least he had Cindy some of the time," Leora said. "From what I gather, she tried her best to be kind to him when Gabriel wasn't around. We'll have a lot more to hear about her from young Josh, no doubt, when he feels well enough to tell us about her."

"He can't know yet that she's dead," Peter pointed out.

"It doesn't bear thinking about, what it must have been like for him in here," Colin said finally, as the last pieces of evidence were bagged and taken away for analysis. "It would screw my head up for years, having to spend even a night here, never mind ten days. I hope with all my heart that Josh isn't too badly affected by the experience."

"Well, he will be getting counseling for a while, from what I understand," Leora told him. "And kids are much more resilient than adults."

Colin sighed and turned to the policemen

SHUVU

Don't Forget About The Children of Israel

At a point when charity begins at home, spare some thought for the future of Shuvu.

Meet Mordechai. He came to Israel as a toddler from Azerbaijan. When his father was unable to find work, he began drinking and subsequently became violent and abusive towards his family. Mordechai was already in the second grade at Shuvu Netanya School when his father burnt down the family home, but the love and support he received from Shuvu school staff helped him regain trust in others and he went from strength to strength in his studies and social life.

Mordechai is just one of many thousands children who have benefitted from Shuvu services, yet the charity-funded school network is struggling to make ends meet.

Now, more than at any other time, the pupils – many from single-parent families living below the poverty – want you to know about their school.

Pupils such as Yisrael who grew up in Ashdod with Russian immigrant parents wants you to know that because of Shuvu, hardship did not prevent him from graduating and becoming a First Lieutenant in the Intelligence Unit of the Israeli army before starting medical school.

And his experience is not unique.

"Shuvu's network of kindergartens, primary and high schools throughout Israel offer students from all backgrounds an outstanding education," says David Blachman, chairman of the British Friends of Shuvu. "The schools equip students with the skills and knowledge to become independent, successful and productive members of Israeli society."

David Blachman is well aware that all charities are now struggling to be seen and heard because of the global impact of Covid 19, but this only makes him more determined to bring the needs of children who could fall by the wayside to your attention.

"Our pledge is to nurture the children and offer Jewish values, cohesion and continuity as many have faced far worse than the virus in their homeland."

Shuvu started its programmes in 1990 with two schools providing education for Russian immigrant children and now has an established network of 69 schools and kindergartens at 21 sites across Israel. As well as offering an unrivalled secular education, Shuvu also connects children to their Jewish heritage. "It has changed the lives of over 35,000 students and graduates, and inspired over 100,000 people," says Blachman who has been forging ahead with fundraising since the Covid breakout.

"For every £1 donation we get a group of long-term supporters will match pound for pound," he says

Now is not the time to forget about the children in Israel as they are the country's future and ours too."
