פורים קטן י"ד - ט"ו אדר א' 19/20 February

Life has taught children with learning difficulties to aim low; expect less and avoid disappointment.

Whether it's years of academic failure despite often profound efforts on their end, or consistent struggling and awkwardness on the social scene that helped perpetuate this attitude, Machon Ohr Layeshorim sees children walking through the door with a resigned look and shattered ambitions.

Ever since Machon Ohr Layeshorim opened seven years ago, our goal has always been the same: To enable each child to flourish in their regular classroom setting, becoming the best he could be.

No matter if the challenge is behavioural, emotional, learning, reading or sensory related, our dynamic team of Rebbe's, therapists (Speech & Language, Occupational and Emotional) and therapy assistants will listen, assess, plan and ultimately carry out a supportive program to help every child succeed.

Our therapy and intervention programs begin with setting small and attainable goals, which, once reached, allow children to take a positive view of the correlation between investment and achievement. This in turn gives them the confidence to reach higher and eventually succeed b's'd.

Currently, over 200 children pass through the doors of The Machon each week. Children who struggle every day in cheder now have renewed hope and better self-esteem. Boys who used to dread learning now get a genuine taste of success.

However, many more are waiting to be accepted, but our budget and capacity is limited. Every day we receive requests from parents and chadorim to agree to take in another child...but we simply cannot. Our budget is strained enough as it is.

It's up to YOU to help us help them.

Currently, we are gearing up towards our upcoming fundraising campaign, and we have only one goal. It is our ultimate hope that the funds raised will enable us to benefit more children and positively impact more lives.

We are aiming to raise £360,000, an amount that will go really far and impact the lives of so many children. If every child is an entire world, is it possible to determine the effects of helping one child achieve higher? Feel good about himself? Make friends? Read?

Can the schur of enabling one single child to learn better ever be measured?

Due to the fact that every pound will be matched, your donation will go so much further, helping another child, impacting another life. Now is your chance to show your support for this very unique and noteworthy moisad. This extra funding will go directly towards accepting new children who have been waiting so long to be helped. We are at the front lines, ready to be of service, but we cannot do this without YOU.

Will you help us reach our goal?

We care!

At Ezra Umarpeh, we are driven by a simple belief - no one should have to miss out because of illness and disability. We want people to watch that play, get up those stairs, make Kiddush and enjoy that cake.

Specialised medical equipment, a constant supply of delicious food in our respite rooms and special Shabbos cars... Just some examples of how we improve lives in little and big ways.

While tragedy generates endless sympathy and offers of assistance, when it comes to everyday difficulties, who really cares?

WE DO. THE QUESTION IS, DO YOU?

You've seen the campaign; you know that Ezra Umarpeh is running its annual fundraiser. Our work is vital, but it is in desperate need of funds.

What would you do?

What would you do with a group of disabled children that need entertaining for 6 hours with no suitable premises? Remember, you have to ensure safe transportation, support staff, and exciting activities to ensure that families can continue to function?

Step by Step were unexpectedly in a quandary when the rented premises suddenly became unavailable. Do we cancel provision and leave families stranded with no Sunday Club, or do we go against reality and somehow make it happen? Although it was no easy feat, the impossible happened.

Week after week, with all the difficulties entailed, the children were entertained by going on trips or having a funday at temporary premises. This struggle continued for an entire year. Many different options were scoured and considered to no avail.

With much determination, creativity and Siyata Dishmaya, a local suitable premises was BH found to be available. This was an amazing stroke of Hashkocho Pratis. Three years prior, the management of Step by Step understood the urgent need for a more secure premises, and when the council put out a tender for 39 High road, tremendous effort was invested and the bid was successful. But there was a condition that the space would be used to provide 2 year old placements. At that time the project seemed too big, and with numerous risks and therefore the bid was ultimately rejected by Step by Step.

Unbelievably, that very same premises was still empty and available 3 years later, ready and waiting. With a lot of wheedling and negotiation the council agreed to let the space, without the condition of hosting a two year old provision. But that is only half the story. The second half of the building that now hosts the childrens hub was secured in a most unusual way.

Unknown to us the next door tenant was giving up their lease, and an unknown source divulged this significant piece of information and advised that the lease be taken over, so that a better rental price is secured.

Heart and efforts were expounded to develop the space to make it child and user friendly with 2 large airy activity rooms, a soft play, sensory room, garden kitchen as well as all our offices. This is a home away from home for special children who wait to come here to enjoy the safe and happy space.

Today, week after week the premises is used Shabbos, Yom Tov, Sundays, after schools, and hosts play scheme 3 times annually. The premises provides an amazing opportunity for many local children to be kept fully occupied. Walking in three weeks ago one would be able to pet rabbits, feed a goat and stroke a hamster with an indoor petting zoo brought to our site.

As government and council funding is constantly being cut, Step By Step children were the first to suffer and feel its affects. In spite of this we continue to run and even expand services as a result of the excellent space secured by a dedicated group who fought long and hard to make it happen.

With excitement and anticipation Thursday night finally saw the mezuzas being placed throughout the building by our newly inaugurated Rav, Rabbi Yitzchok Friedman with a small reception held for the committee members.

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

"Is anyone staying with you to see her through this? Her mother or a friend?"

"Frankly, we don't want it. We find it an intrusion. They don't know what to say to us, apart from silly platitudes we find irritating. We end up having to entertain them or keep reassuring them that we aren't falling apart. To be honest with you, Detective Inspector, the only sort of people who would be tolerable in our home right now are people like yourself. People who are getting on with finding where my son is. Anyone else is a nuisance. Sorry if I sound ungrateful, but we have to cope the best way we know how, and we have no resources left to either entertain or reassure. We just support each other."

Colin nodded his understanding. He led Don into a small and cluttered office. Sweeping a pile of papers onto a small side table and clearing some space in his desk, he said, "Bachelor habits." Don shrugged a "doesn't bother me" gesture and they sat. "Do you go into work?" he asked Don. "Yes. I have to. It would do Ilana good to come in, too. I'm trying to persuade her. Rattling around alone in that big house with no one but Maria for company is driving her nuts. She needs the distraction of work and company. But she's constantly worried that she might miss a vital phone call or e-mail."

"Surely you can arrange to have your home calls diverted to your office during the day?"

"Of course we can. But she's lost all trust in the system. The system which allowed her precious baby to be abducted might let her down if she isn't there to constantly monitor the phone, fax, and e-mail, too. That's how she's thinking at the moment, but it's early days and I'm hoping I can persuade her to come into work soon, even for a few hours a day. Maria loved that boy almost as much as we and would guard the phone and computer like a centurion."

"It would help her if she could be persuaded to carry on as normal a life as possible," Colin said gently.

Don nodded. "I'll try my best. Now, about this e-mail."

"Yes. The e-mail. Let's take another look at it." Colin spread the printout on his desk. "Hm. Let me make a copy of this. It will be easier."

Once they each had a copy, they sat and studied it for a while.

"Well," Don began, "sounds like someone with a problem about being Jewish. Accusing us of antisemitism, for heaven's sake."

"Bit weird, isn't it?"

"Definitely weird."

They looked at it again.

"The last bit. The bit about revenge being a 'dish best eaten cold.' This is the clue to the motive."

"Revenge? Not money, then?"

"It certainly isn't following any of the normal patterns of kidnapping for ransom, no. There has been no ransom demand, and there nearly always is one by this stage. Anyway, if they wanted to kidnap for money, with all due respect to your good selves, you wouldn't have been the target. I've seen the way you live, and unless you are a miserly billionaire, you are not the typical target of a kidnapper for ransom."

Don managed a smile. "You're right. We don't have that much money. We get by, but there are many more wealthy families in Golders Green."

"Not only wealthy, Mr. Hardman, but overtly wealthy. Stupidly so, if you ask me."

Don said, "But who would want to take revenge on us? What have we done? I don't understand."

"That's for you to tell me, Mr. Hardman."

"Nothing as far as I know. I don't think I've made any enemies." Don sat, thinking, a puzzled frown creasing his forehead.

"Usually it's the rich ones who make the enemies," agreed Colin. "Jealousy, resentment, you name it, the rich come in for it. But in your case...?"

"I'm not rich. No one is jealous of me. I only have one son. Most people around here have large families, so they're certainly not jealous of me for that."

"What about in your work? A disgruntled ex-employee?"

"Hm. I thought I had a very good relationship with my employees."

"Have all your present employees been with you for some time?"

"You asked me this once before."

"So humor me. Tell me again. I need to get a clearer picture."

"We are four partners. We built the business up from scratch. My partners are all Jewish, all Orthodox, and I trust them implicitly."

Colin nodded his understanding at this.

"My wife is a kind of sub-partner. There are five guys on tech support. Shift workers, eight hours at a time, round the clock. We get phone calls at all times of the day and night. The two secretaries are middle-aged. They've been with us for years. One is due to retire soon. Neither of them knows a thing about computers except how to save and print. They're always calling in the tech support guys to help them if they get a problem with the word processor. The older of the two likes to type on an electric typewriter rather than a computer. Neither of them use the Internet; they wouldn't have the faintest idea how. They type letters and reports. That's it."

"Isn't that a bit of a disadvantage for you, being an Internet company?" Colin asked, mildly amused by this account of the two secretaries.

"Yeah, but to be honest with you, they're loyal and efficient in their own way, and they don't waste time. When one of them was off sick for a while, we took a young girl as a temp. She knew all about the Internet, could type like a rocket — and was absolutely useless."

"Oh?"

"Within seconds she had telnetted into an IRC server and was using the chat rooms to talk to her friends instead of working. She cost the company a fortune in work not done. Lucky our permanent connection meant no extra phone bills, too. We got rid of her as soon as we could and were glad to get our old, computer-illiterate secretary back again."

Colin grinned. "Heh. I see. So newer isn't always better."

"By no means."

"Okay. Now your tech-support people. Tell me about them."

"Three have been with us for over a year. They're slightly older than the usual techie types. Harry, Ewan, and Dave are in their early forties, graying, and very good at what they do. The other two, Ben and Kev, are young. Early twenties, fresh out of college with computer science degrees. They know everything there is to know about building and maintaining a computer from the bottom up and absolutely nothing about customer relations. Their telephone manner leaves a lot to be desired, but they know their job so well that we turn a blind eye. Ilana has been trying to teach them how to be polite and helpful on the phone and not laugh when a newbie phones in with some query the two guys perceive as ignorant. Like the lady who phoned in complaining that her coffee cup holder was broken on the front of her computer."

Colin looked puzzled for a moment.

"She had been using her CD-ROM drive to hold her coffee cups."

Colin laughed aloud.
