SCHMERLING'S CHOCOLATE BARS.
OVER 15 FLAVOURS of KOSHER L'PESACH LUXURY.

The advertisement features a collection of Schmerling's chocolate bars. In the background, a large box of 'Rosemarie Harmony' is displayed, showing a swirl of white chocolate and a honeycomb. Below it, a stack of bars includes 'Swiss White Chocolate with Almonds', 'Finest bittersweet Swiss Chocolate', and 'Finest Swiss White Chocolate'. In the center, a box of 'SWISS MILK' is prominently shown, featuring a mountain peak and a bowl of milk. To the right, a stack of bars includes 'Rosemarie Milk', 'Rosemarie Caramel', 'Rosemarie Parve', 'Rosemarie Kids', 'Rosemarie Cappuccino', 'Rosemarie Coconut', and 'Rosemarie Split'. In the foreground, several bars are unwrapped, showing the 'Harmony' and 'Rosemarie' brands. A red circular stamp with Hebrew text 'כשר לפסח' (Kosher for Pesach) is visible on the right side. The Schmerling's logo 'of Switzerland' is at the bottom left, and the 'HATOV' logo is at the bottom right.

BIG NEWS

FOR SMALL BUSINESS

The Max Barney Foundation is proud to sponsor JTrade 2019 and has, in line with its mission of supporting employment and encouraging small businesses, procured a limited number of stands for up and coming entrepreneurs.

These stands are specifically to give exposure to budding businesses that would greatly benefit from the opportunity and exposure JTrade offers and would be otherwise unable to exhibit.

THE MAX
BARNEY FOUNDATION

Proud to support JTRADE
LONDON 2019

If you are a small business owner and would like to apply for one of these stands, we'd love to hear from you

Pesach collection service 2019

A Pesach refuse service will be in operation at houses on 300+ pre-designated roads, making it simple for residents to dispose of Pesach refuse and Chometz before Passover. You can check if you live on a pre-designated road by visiting www.barnet.gov.uk/pesach-collection

Pre-designated roads

If your normal refuse collection day is...

Tuesday 16 April or Wednesday 17 April, your collection arrangements are as follows:

Your refuse bin collection will take place as scheduled. In addition to emptying your refuse bins, a maximum of three sacks per household will be collected on your normal collection day. Collections will take place from 6am from the boundary of your property

On Thursday 18 April, a maximum of three sacks per household will be collected.

We will only collect your refuse sacks on this day, we will not be emptying your bin. These collections will take place from midday.

If your normal refuse collection day is

Thursday 18 April or Friday 19 April, your collection arrangements are as follows:

Your refuse bin collection will take place as scheduled. In addition to emptying your refuse bins, a maximum of three sacks per household will be collected on your normal collection day.

Please note that collections may take place at a different time of day than usual. There will be no additional collection.

Collections will take place from 6am from the boundary of your property.

Non-designated roads

Your refuse bin collection will take place as scheduled.

A pre-bookable collection of a maximum of three refuse sacks to take place on Friday 19 April can be requested by emailing pesach@barnet.gov.uk or calling 020 8359 4600 from 9am on Monday 8 April until midday on Friday 12 April.

We will only collect your refuse sacks on this day, we will not be emptying your bin.

Collections will take place from 6am from the boundary of your property.

Friday 19 April

There will also be five Barnet waste collection vehicles at fixed locations, where you can bring up to three refuse sacks for disposal between 10am and 4pm on Friday 19 April:

1. NW11 – The Ridgeway near junction with Gresham Gardens
2. NW11 – Golders Green Road near no. 208 Golders Green Road
3. NW11 – Decoy Avenue near junction with Bridge Lane
4. NW4 – Green Lane near junction with Brent Street
5. HA8 – Broadfields Avenue near junction with The Drive

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

DAY 5

Chapter Twelve

Ilana slept deeply. One would have expected sleep to be hard to come by, but for her it was an escape to a place where she was still with her son.

In her dream, she was running through a field of poppies, holding his hand. He was keeping up with her long-legged strides, two paces to each of hers and laughing up into her face. They collapsed together into a heap in the crushed flowers, giggling and rolling, the opiate scent filling their nostrils, making their heads swim. She cuddled her son, ruffled his dark hair, and looked into his vivid blue eyes. Her heart was so full of maternal happiness and fulfillment that she thought it might burst through her skin. They played together in the poppy field, heads dizzy with happiness and crushed flowers.

Her dream ended. She struggled to clutch onto it, but it slipped from her unwilling grasp. She could feel herself beginning to waken, and like a fish being dragged from the water by an angler, she fought against the hook and line and dove under for one last breath of life-giving fluid.

Reluctantly, so reluctantly, Ilana was dragged, internally kicking and screaming, from the dream into the vacuity of reality. Her empty arms ached. She could still feel the warmth of her small son's body within them, and now they hurt with the pain of absence.

"Leave me alone," she moaned, fresh tears already flowing, watering the last of the poppies as they dissolved from her consciousness. No, no, no. Don't drag me from this wonderful place where I play with my son. Please, don't make me leave...

The fish lay gasping on the riverbank.

Ilana opened her eyes to a world without Josh in it. Then Don came into the room, carrying the cordless telephone.

"Ilana? Oh, good, you're awake. Colin Sommers is on the phone."

"I don't want to talk to anyone," Ilana wept, turning her back on him and pulling the covers over her head.

"Ilana, come. You won't mind this phone call. Remember that specialist I said we should call in? It seems she's coming over! Let's not tell anyone how we got her to come. It's our secret." Don handed her the cordless phone.

Struggling, she sat up in bed and took it. She looked at her watch. It was nine o'clock. If she had not been disturbed, she would have slept the day away. There seemed so little point in being awake.

"Hello?"

"Good morning, Mrs. Hardman. It's Detective Inspector Sommers. I have some news for you."

Her heart leaped. "You have found Josh?"

"No, not yet."

Her heart sank a little, even though she knew the purpose of the phone call. "So, Inspector Sommers, what news could you possibly have which would be of interest to me?"

"An expert criminologist from New York has been assigned to this case. Is coming over even as we speak, in fact."

"Oh? And how did he hear about us? We hardly rate the same giddy heights of fame as the Lindbergh baby, do we?"

Don, listening to this one-sided conversation from across the room, could not help but grin at Ilana and give her the thumbs up for her acting ability.

"The criminologist is a she, Mrs. Hardman. Her name is Leora Jakober. I am not sure how or why she has been assigned to us, but I must say I am most pleased to have the assistance."

"Leora Jakober? That's a very Jewish-sounding name, Detective Inspector."

"Lots of Jews in New York," Colin said uncomfortably.

"Yes, I suppose there are," Ilana admitted, feeling silly.

"Well, Leora Jakober has graduated magna cum laude from the University of South Florida in criminology. She now works for the New York Police Department and is treasured by them for her expertise in detection. Her specialty is the analysis of trace evidence. She can find out a lot from the flimsiest of clues. Which is what we have here," he added.

"And she is interested in this case?"

"She certainly is. So much so that she is on her way over to give us her expertise."

"Is she Mrs. or Miss Jakober?" Ilana couldn't help asking.

"Miss, apparently."

"Iron-haired, iron-willed spinster type," Ilana surmised.

Colin smiled to himself. "It's hard to say over the telephone, Mrs. Hardman, but she certainly didn't give the impression of being very old."

"We'll see anyway. So she's coming today?"

"I think so. I am sending a car to meet her at the airport this evening."

"Where will she stay?"

Colin hadn't thought that far ahead. "I have no idea."

"She can stay here," Ilana said firmly. "After all, I have plenty of room. Especially now."

"Makes sense, I suppose," the policeman agreed.

"She will have more opportunity to study the situation. Thank you very much, Mrs. Hardman. Now, I have spoken to your husband, and he has agreed to let me and my colleague interview the staff at his office. Try to get a handle on them, if you get my meaning. I will spend today doing that until Miss Jakober arrives."

"All right, Detective Inspector."

The connection broken, Ilana sank back on her pillows. "This woman. You know her?"

"Actually, my mother told me about her. Her aunt is a friend of my mother's. She told me about Leora because she thought it was unusual that a criminologist would become religious."

"Oh, so she's a ba'alas teshuvah? How far has she come?"

"I would say modern Orthodox."

"Is she really as good as she sounds?"

"Her reputation as a criminologist definitely precedes her," Don said.

"We're paying for her to come?"

"Yes."

"She'd better be worth it."

"Will you get up and maybe try a little bit of work today?" Don coaxed. Since the discovery of the second e-mail, Ilana had refused to go anywhere near her computer, almost as if she were afraid it might jump out and bite her. "I have to go into the office to be present when Detective Inspector Sommers interviews my staff," he went on. "Maybe you'd like to be there? A woman's intuition can sometimes pick up things we poor, simple-minded men might miss. A look, an intonation in someone's voice. A glance between two people that speaks more eloquently than words. You've always been good at noticing things like that; I'm the unobservant one. Will you be there? Please, Ilana?"

"The detective said the lady in New York will be arriving tonight," she said, sitting up straighter in bed.

"That's right. So we might as well do something productive in the meantime to help find Josh."

"All right. I think I will come with you to the office," Ilana said.
