Neurosteps Physio-Neuro Therapy is a comprehensive one-on-one therapy program that combines mental and physical exercises to strengthen the ways your child processes the world around them.

Neurosteps goes past the makeshift solutions to address and cure the underlying cause of your child's academic and social issues.

ADD/ADHD, FOCUS, READING, VISUAL MEMORY,
SPATIAL AWARENESS, DISORGANIZATION, COORDINATION.

Call us today to hear about how this program has helped hundreds of children, and how we can help your child succeed.

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

Chapter Nine cont.

He sent off his work and downloaded whatever e-mail was waiting for him on the server. Among the work-related mail was one from the U.K. with an unfamiliar address. He scanned the work e-mail quickly to see if there was anything that urgently required his attention, then disconnected from the service and opened up the e-mail from England.

"Avi, we need your help here," it began.

As he read, his sense of shock and horror increased with each word. The Hardman kid missing? Abducted? Untraceable e-mails? His mind started to race. Quickly he typed a reply. Please forward me the originals of the two e-mails exactly as the Hardmans received them, and any other they get, immediately. I think I know how this was accomplished, but I will need to study the letters.

He clicked Send and the letter vanished. Sitting in front of the computer, still logged in, his brain was whirring at warp speed. Then his fingers whizzed over the keyboard in a blur of movement, and he clicked Send again and the screen cleared. He disconnected and sat back, cracking his knuckles loudly. He sat there a few moments more, apparently inert, but everything inside was buzzing, circuits alight with thought. Then, with a sigh, he returned to his bread-and-butter work, the next piece of programming.

The e-mail he sent back to England was picked up, but not by who it was intended for. It was intercepted, read on the server, and deleted. The Fox absorbed the knowledge that somewhere out there was someone who was, brain for brain, a match for him.

Well, almost.

I have the kid. And as long as I have the kid, I have the upper hand.

Using a hacking program he had downloaded, he reentered the server he had used to read the mail. He forged a similar e-mail, using the same headers and return address. Then, leaving the mail on the server, he kicked over his traces. First he deleted the log files which registered his entry. Then he installed special programs that made him appear invisible. Satisfied, he logged out and left the system as if he had never been there.

The Internet Fox was gone.

- DAY FOUR -

Chapter Ten

"A Mr. Baruch Weiss is on the phone, sir," Potter said on the intercom. Colin growled.

"I'm being driven mad about that search they want to do," he grumbled. "Can't you get rid of him?"

"Why don't you just let them do the search? Can't hurt, can it?" Potter said puzzled.

"Because, Potter, I'd be daft to allow amateurs to do a job for professionals. You know what I'm most worried about here, Potter? With bumbling Orthodox amateurs fiffing and faffing about Golders Green, mucking things up, they might even flush him out of where he was and put him on the run to somewhere we really can't catch him. Make things much worse, in other words." "Hmm. I see," Potter said and clicked off the intercom to speak to Baruch Weiss. He came on again in a minute.

"He said you told him you would authorize the search," Potter said ruefully after getting an earful from Weiss.

"Tell him I never said I would authorize it. I said I'd look into it. And I have. And at the moment the answer is no. I'll let him know if we decide to authorize a search."

Baruch Weiss hung up despondently. He had managed to drum up such enthusiasm among his colleagues on this authorization, and, if he was entirely honest with himself, he was quite enjoying the feeling of importance being the organizer had engendered. Mind you, he still held the "card" of Avi Pincus. Which reminded him. He hadn't checked if Avi had sent a reply to their e-mail. He phoned Pinny Bloch.

"I just wondered if you've had a reply to that e-mail you sent Avi," Baruch asked.

"Yes, I have as a matter of fact."

"Well? Why didn't you call me and tell me what he said?" Baruch was annoyed.

Pinny sighed. "Because I didn't think you'd like it. To be honest, it's a weird reply. It doesn't sound like the Avi I know. I've been puzzling over it for ages, ever since it arrived."

"Read it."

There were a few clicks. Pinny was bringing it up on his computer screen.

"Here it is. It goes like this: 'Sorry I can't help you. This is not my area of expertise. Avraham.'"

There was a pause while Baruch digested this.

"Not his area of expertise? It's exactly his area of expertise."

"That's what I thought. Maybe we overestimated how much he can do."

Baruch shook his head violently. "No. I know this guy. He loves a challenge. Nothing he likes better than to do at least three impossible things before breakfast. The Avi Pincus I know would be tearing his brain apart working out a solution."

There was another pause.

"Darn it," Baruch said suddenly.

"What?" Pinny asked.

"Avi never signs his name Avraham. Never. Ever."

"What are you saying?"

"I'm saying this is totally weird. Maybe someone got hold of his computer and replied to the mail before he found it, then erased it."

"Then that person would be in Jerusalem."

"Yeah. Or maybe..." said Baruch thoughtfully.

"What? Maybe what?"

"It was intercepted."

"Intercepted? How?"

"Heaven knows. I don't. I don't know diddly squat about the Internet, never mind all this techie stuff."

"Well, whoever intercepted it is very shortsighted. All we gotta do is phone Avi and ask what he wrote in the mail."

"True. It bought whoever it is a bit of time, that's all."

"Maybe time is what he needed."

"I'll call Avi now and call you right back," Baruch said and hung up.

He dialed the number he had for Avi Pincus in Jerusalem.

"Avi's gone to the office, Baruch," his wife, Hannah, said. "I can give you his number there."

Baruch dialed the office and finally tracked Avi down. When Baruch read out the reply they had received, Avi sucked in his breath between his teeth.

"I didn't send that letter. Are you sure it says it comes from me?"

Baruch read out the header and return address.

"Hmmm," Avi said very slowly. "I think we are up against one very smart cookie. Someone who really knows his way around the Internet. I have to stand back and admire this guy's ingenuity."

"Would you know how he did all these ingenious things?" Baruch asked.

"Not offhand, but I'll work on it. The e-mail I sent asked you to send me the e-mails exactly as you received them so I can see them for myself and work out how to trace them."

"You think you can?"
