EXCEEDING EXPECTATIONS...

18 DAYS TO GO...

WHAT'LL THIS YEAR'S EXPO BE LIKE?

The Exhibitors

Following the overwhelming success of our 2018 expo, with its 165 stands and jam-packed hall, we took a calculated risk and booked double the floor space in the London ExCel. Our hunch paid off; to date, we've sold 260 stands, all booked by a diverse mix of UK companies ranging from sole traders to national corporations.

The Visitors:

Like its predecessor, this year's expo was heavily featured in Jewish media across the UK and promoted in ads, articles and videos. The response has been overwhelming; we've been inundated with calls, emails and countless signups from all over London, Manchester, Liverpool and Gateshead. Visitor numbers are expected to exceed 5000!

The Speakers:

We've actually upped our game on this one, the Speakers Corner this year boasts an impressive line-up of professional business lecturers who will provide invaluable business tips, experience and advice. Watch out for further details over the next two weeks.

Refreshments & Business Facilities:

Our designated refreshment stand will provide free sandwiches, hot/cold drinks and snacks throughout the day, courtesy of Grodzinski's.

JTrade's goal is, primarily, to allow Jewish entrepreneurs to get to meet relevant businessmen, network among each other and woo potential clients. A large number of deals are expected to be sealed right at the actual expo... and the ideal venue is our VIP meeting area, hosted by Work Avenue. Quiet, secluded and comfortable, it's just the ticket for serious business talks- and hopefully, signing of dotted lines.

FORW>RD:
your future TODAY

WHAT IS FORWARD?

Forward is a new Division of Agudas Yisroel [UK] focusing on enabling and empowering the next generation of business and employment in our communities.

WHAT SERVICES ARE YOU GOING TO PROVIDE?

We are beginning with Vocational-Skills Training, Job Readiness, Career Training followed by Job Placement.

WHO DOES IT CATER FOR?

Yungerleit who are planning in joining the workforce either immediately or in the future. It will also assist those already in existing employment to upgrade their skills, thus enabling them to seek an improved position or job.

WHAT IS THE BACKGROUND?

Agudas Yisroel, through its various departments currently assists hundreds of people every year, supporting them in their mission to achieve a stable livelihood. However, many of those seeking assistance have little or no training and knowledge of the workforce, and certainly no experience. Others, whilst in existing employment, are on very basic jobs with salaries that have no growth potential. With the ever-rising cost of living, this presents a serious challenge within our communities. These are some of the issues Forward will be addressing.

WHAT NEW IDEAS OR CONCEPTS ARE "FORWARD" BRINGING TO THE MARKET?

- Strong focus on creating deliverable programmes that will lead to a clear path to employment.
- Job Placements: assisting those who successfully complete the programmes into meaningful employment.
- Working closely with industry experts to provide guidance and mentoring to participants of our Programmes.

WHAT SPECIFIC PROGRAMMES ARE YOU GOING TO PROVIDE?

We are beginning with Amazon Marketplace, Graphic Design, Bookkeeping /Accounting, Job Readiness training, and IT Skills, and we are working on adding many more options.

DO YOU HAVE RABBINICAL GUIDANCE BACKING THE ORGANISATION?

Yes. Forward is under supervision and guidance of Rabbonim of our Kehillah. Much emphasis has been put in ensuring that all programmes and content are suitable for Heimishe Yungerleit; taking place in a heimishe environment.

ARE THERE ANY ADDITIONAL PLANS?

As mentioned above, we are starting with handful of programmes but are working on adding many more platforms in the near future. We are also planning to add business-specific programmes to support and stimulate business start-up and entrepreneurship.

HOW DO I SIGN UP TO ONE THE PROGRAMMES OR FIND OUT MORE INFO?

You can get in touch with us either via phone or email. Please find contacts details below.

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

"Yes. Marty will show you the ropes before he goes off his shift."

"I'm a fast learner," Avi assured him. Secretly he was astounded that Lukavac was willing to take him on without references or looking into him too much. But looking around at this cowboy outfit, maybe he shouldn't have been so surprised. And it was the perfect provider for the Fox to use. Nice and sloppy and one where they wouldn't bother checking around too much. Well, he intended to do some checking just as soon as he was left alone.

"There's a café around the corner if you want to go out and get some dinner," Marty told him as he showed him around later, when the others had left. A male cleaner worked grumpily behind them, sweeping and mopping.

"Nah, that's okay. I brought some sandwiches for supper," Avi said, silently blessing his forethought to bring food with him from home. That morning seemed an awfully long way away now.

Marty peered at him. "You're Jewish, aren't you?"

"Yup, I am. Why?"

"That's why Mr. Lukavac took you on so quick. He trusts Jews. I think he has Jewish blood somewhere in his genes."

"Ah, I see. I did wonder."

"Specially when it's one of them religious Jews. He really trusts them."

"And so he should," Avi assured him firmly. Marty finished showing Avi all the relevant parts of the network and machines. "There, that about wraps it up," he said.

"I feel right at home here already," Avi said, wishing the young man would leave. He started work on a machine and waited.

Marty stood around watching him for a while, testing his competence, no doubt. Avi wasn't worried. He had studied long and hard and worked for several computer companies. There was little he didn't know about computers. Besides being a superb software engineer, he could build a computer from the ground up in any configuration one could want and had studied firewalls and networks in his last place of employment. After ten minutes or so of listening to Avi's purposely tuneless whistling designed to drive even the calmest man to beg the men in white coats to come and take him away, Marty succumbed. It was either that or the funny farm.

"Well, if you're sure you'll be okay, I'll be off. You've got your worksheet, so you know what your jobs are for tonight."

"Yep. Plenty to keep me busy till the shift ends," Avi assured him. "In fact, there's enough here to keep me busy for three shifts. Bit of a slavedriver, Renard is."

"A bit," Marty agreed, relaxing into the "slagging off the boss" role, which instantly gave them a peer-group camaraderie. "He can be a real pain, especially when he gives us extra work and goes home early himself."

The two of them spent a few minutes in a general moan about the boss which Avi decided was time very well spent. Marty relaxed even more and decided the new employee was a good sort.

"I'll be off, then," Marty said for the third time, and this time he meant it.

Once he had gone, Avi was left alone in the premises except for the cleaner. His tasks were to answer all overnight calls from customers (which, they assured him, were rare), fix the firewall and networking which wasn't working properly, and attend to some minor software bugs.

Avi worked fast and efficiently. He had a purpose in mind, and it wasn't the salary or the ambience. But he wanted to be fair to his employer, too, so before he got down to the real business at hand, he did all the jobs listed on the worksheet. And did them well. He also answered two support calls from regular complainers who were amazed at how sensibly he sorted their problems. "Hey, you must be new. The usual guy on the phones has zilch idea how to answer my questions," one of the regulars said, impressed. Avi glowed with the praise despite himself.

At eleven, the cleaner knocked off for the night, having mopped and dusted all around Avi and practically over him, too. Grumbling to himself about night staff getting under his feet, he packed up his cleaning materials and let himself out of the locked offices.

Avi was alone at last.

Colin and Peter waited at arrivals for Leora Jakober to arrive.

"We could have sent a constable or someone else to pick her up," Peter grumbled. "I'm tired and I wanted to go home early tonight." "Stop whining, man," Colin chided him. "This is a VIP, and we can't just send any old copper to go meet her. Anyway, I want to see her arrive, first impressions and all that."

Peter grunted. He didn't see why he couldn't have been let off this particular duty, but Colin wanted him along.

"I hate airports," Peter grumbled. "Too many people coming back from too many exotic holidays for my liking. When's the last time I had one? A week in Bognor, that's what I got last summer."

"Nothing wrong with Bognor if you like freezing cold English seaside resorts with low-class hotels," Colin said. "Myself, I prefer Tenerife."

Peter glared at him. "The furthest abroad I've been is to Calais on the shuttle to buy duty-free liquor."

Peter, who had been holding up a small placard which read "Leora Jakober," was approached by a tall woman with auburn shoulder-length hair and slightly slanted green eyes.

"Hi," she said with a broad American accent. "I'm Leora Jakober."

They both stared. Whatever they had envisioned a criminologist to look like, it wasn't this.

"My suitcase is there. I only brought one small one. Can one of you carry it for me?" She smiled broadly.

Peter picked up her bag. She carried a small knapsack on her back and a neat shoulder purse.

"Any news on the kid?" she asked as they loaded her baggage into the car.

"Not had any more e-mails, but we might have a lead. We'll explain more on the journey home."

"You've got trace evidence for me to look at, right?"

"Yes, from the kid's room. Puzzles us, to be honest, so we could do with an outside opinion."

She grinned as they drove onto the motorway. "That's what I'm here for."
