JOB VACANCY

MATERNITY COVER REQUIRED FOR DECEMBER 2019 – JULY 2020. PART-TIME.

We are looking for an enthusiastic, dedicated and creative Jewish Studies teacher to join our hard working and devoted EYFS team. The successful candidate will be responsible for effective planning, teaching and assessment and play a significant role in our Jewish Studies department.

We are looking for candidates with

- A strong commitment to learning and teaching in the Early Years.
- Good communication and interpersonal skills
- Good organisational skills, ability to work as part of a team.
- Limitless enthusiasm
- A secure knowledge of the Jewish Studies subject(s) and EYFS curriculum areas

We can offer you an "Outstanding" school which:

- Is a warm, friendly and supportive place to work
- Has excellent opportunities for professional development
- Good working conditions for the Jewish Studies department

Experienced teachers and NQTs welcome to apply.

Visits to the school are highly recommended – our children are our best advert.

We are committed to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children - applicants will be subject to an Enhanced DBS Disclosure and reference checks.

Please contact Mrs. Buchanan in the school office for an application form s.buchanan@kingdavidprimary.manchester.sch.uk

Accounts Assistant

Required for November 2019
This position is part time, term time only

We are seeking to appoint an organised and reliable Accounts Assistant. They should have the ability to work on their own initiative as well as part of a team in a busy office while maintaining discretion. A good telephone manner and the ability to liaise with parents and donors is essential. Training will be provided.

Working hours are flexible and salary is commensurate with relevant experience. There is an Ofsted-registered on-site Crèche (rated 'Good', January 2019).

Applicants are welcome to visit the school, rated 'Good' (Ofsted May 2019), which can be arranged through the School Office.

To request an application form and information pack please email admin@beisyaakov.barnet.sch.uk

Closing date for applications: Friday 11th October 2019 at 12:00pm
(Please be advised we will respond to applicants immediately after the Succos break)

Our School and all its personnel are committed to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of the children. This post is subject to an Enhanced Disclosure Application to the Disclosure and Barring Service.

TO BE CONT. NEXT WEEK IY"H

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

Leora took several photographs. "Shame there's nothing to take a raised impression from," she sighed. "But I think I'll have something to work on with these." She got up gracefully and took the blackout cloth from on top of the playhouse, folded it neatly, and put it back in her backpack.

"So do you think they were here?" Colin asked.

"Well, somebody was here, that's for sure," Leora replied. She looked at her watch. "I think if I can get access to a darkroom now and get back to the station to compare these samples, that will be enough. It's after two o'clock. Maybe I can get something to eat? Ilana said there was a kosher grocery near the station."

"Yes, of course. You can pick up a sandwich or a danish."

"And the darkroom?" Leora asked as they got into the car.

"There is one at the station. We keep it for just such a purpose. It's small but you are welcome to use it."

"Great!"

Back at the station, the three walked in to find an agitated desk clerk. "You turned your mobile off," he accused.

"Did I?" Colin replied, unruffled.

"I've been trying to call you ever since you left the station. Your mobile is definitely switched off!"

Colin pulled his phone out of his pocket, looked at it, pressed a few buttons. "Bother. It's not switched off. It's dead."

"Don't you ever recharge it?" Peter snorted derisively.

"I do recharge it. Every single night before I go to bed I put it in the charger..." Colin stopped and thought. Last night was a total blur, but he vaguely remembered being so exhausted that his usual pre-bed ritual had gone right out the window to be replaced by an all-encompassing collapse and oblivion.

"Flip," he said, stopping.

"Yeah, flip," Potter said.

"Sorry. Last night...well. What did you want?" Colin asked, looking suitably chastised. Keeping the lines of communication open was one of the basics of police work.

"Someone called Abraham Pincus has been ringing and ringing. Said he had some news relevant to the Hardman case."

"Oh. The supergeek. I wonder what he's been up to. Where was he ringing from? Somewhere nice and far away, I trust?"

"Local call," Potter said.

"Uh-oh. He's in England, is he? I thought that pesky Baruch Weiss said he lived in Israel or Australia."

Colin suddenly got even more worried about what Baruch had been up to behind his back. He hated it when Joe Public got up to all kinds of crime-solving messes and took the law into his own hands. Joe Public should be sitting nicely and quietly at home, waiting for people like he, Detective Inspector Colin Sommers, to solve crimes for them.

"He's left a number. Said it was urgent." Potter pushed a piece of paper across the desk. He assumed the bored expression he had been practicing whenever Colin started on the "pesky Baruch Weiss" tack, which was beginning to get rather tedious.

"Um, a darkroom?" said Leora, who had been standing there patiently during this exchange. "I'd like to get these films developing, and then I'll look at this trace evidence that we picked up at the playhouse." "Oh, yes. Potter, show Miss Jakober the darkroom while I call Mr. Pincus back, will you please?" Colin said, going into his office and closing the door. He was irritated. Irritated because he felt increasingly that the case was being taken out of his hands, by pesky interfering civilians on the one hand and by Super Cleverclogs on the other. And if that wasn't enough, his office was cluttered with Peter's stuff and he could barely move. He liked to have space. It helped him to think clearly.

He climbed over the extraneous furniture and equipment and managed with a bit of contortion to sit down at his desk where he attempted to stretch out his legs without kicking over Peter's stuff. He heard something crunch. "Whoops, what was that?" Colin muttered. "Oh, well, too late now. Later. Now, I know I have a phone here somewhere..."

He phoned the number Potter had given him, and the connection was made almost at once, as if Pincus was sitting by the phone, which he probably was.

"Oh, at last!" Avi said with a deep breath. "I've left so many messages I was beginning to think it was my deodorant."

Colin couldn't suppress a bark of laughter. "I'm really sorry. I forgot to recharge my mobile. It won't happen again. I'm likely to be officially reprimanded for it because it's a heinous crime around here to be out of touch."

"Oh, I see. Well, what I wanted to tell you was that I think I might have an address for the Fox."

Colin's legs flew out from under the desk, and he heard another crunch. "Whoops. An address, you say? As in a postal address?"

"Yup. Right here in Golders Green."

"And how, may I ask, did you find that out?"

"Ah. Yes. Well. I was afraid you might ask that."

Colin sat up very straight in his chair, and whatever it was that had crunched underfoot was dragged forward, crunching a bit more. "Yes, Mr. Pincus. I am asking you. What have you been up to? You'd better tell me the whole story, and this had better be good." When Avi had finished telling his story, he said, "At this stage I thought I had better hand it over to the professionals. I've done the preliminary legwork, but now it's up to you."

"Nice of you to see it that way," Colin said with heavy sarcasm.

Avi sighed. "I know, but would you have been able to achieve what I achieved, legit? Be honest. I had to find SmallNet's log files, and they were unlikely to have given them up voluntarily, certainly not without alerting the subscriber involved."

"But you got a job there under false pretenses in order to search through their confidential files. Hardly ethical."

"It's called going undercover, Detective," Avi said.

Colin sighed. "Yeah, well, I can't deny you did a good job. Did you leave the workplace tidy and neat and in a state where they could not have guessed you'd been snooping around?"

Uprooted in France Planted in California

After searching through dozens of clones, soils and planting locations, the Herzog family selected the Musqué Clone for their Lineage series. Originating in Bordeaux, France 1962—this uniquely aromatic Sauvignon Blanc is perfectly matched with the rugged soil, clean air and warm climate of Lake County, California. In bringing them together, the family has crafted an elegant Sauvignon Blanc that captures every nuance of the Musqué Clone.

92

Herzog Lineage 2017 Sauvignon Blanc, Lake County made from the Musqué clone, has a nose that reminded us of pineapple upside-down cake. Lemon curd aromas meld with grassy notes while vanilla pudding adds a creamy texture to the mid-palate. This unique creature finishes with honeyed apricot.
