Darkei Avos would like to congratulate all participants over the past 4 weeks for partaking in the Pirkei Avos B'Chavrusah/Chaburah competition. It was a huge Kiddush Hashem and a tremendous success with over 40 girls participating weekly; we applaud your initiative to rise to this challenge!

The competition winners over the past 4 weeks were:

Sara BenAsuly
Bryna Cohn
Yael Erber
Tammy Goldstein
Michal Liss
Adina Lopion
Eliora Noimark
Ruti Royde
Chava Brocho Segal
Chaya Kayla Steinhaus
Sara Zobin

Darkei Avos is an exciting new initiative to get girls involved in Pirkei Avos learning. Our programme was designed to resonate with the girls of today; interactive learning guides, incentives and prizes all to fuel the fire of learning. The teachings of Pirkei Avos will give stability in today's turbulent times and help guide our girls to develop their spiritual core and become the best version of themselves.

Dear Valued Client,

Following new government guidance, RCUK's three retail departments will be reopening to customers from Monday 15th June. Please be aware that we have implemented several safety measures to protect both our customers and team members. Please follow the signs and instructions of staff when visiting your local store.

We urge customers to only make essential visits to our stores and to continue contacting our team by phone and via email wherever possible. Our free national shipping service will continue, even with the reopening of our branches. For more information on this, please visit www.rcuk.com/order or call our dedicated orders service on 020 8209 2700.

We ask that customers visiting our stores observe these guidelines to allow us to serve you safely:

- If you have any of the following symptoms, please do not enter our stores

a new continuous cough

a high temperature

a loss of, or change in, your normal sense of taste or smell (anosmia)

- We are limiting the number of clients in the store at a time
- Please apply antibacterial hand gel when entering the store and observe social distancing as indicated by the markers
- To minimise the risk of contamination, we ask that you avoid touching products whilst browsing
- Please shop without extra family members, unless you require special assistance
- Children (under the age of 16) are sadly not permitted to enter our stores at this time. Any child visiting on their own will be treated as a customer in their own right
- Regrettably, our complimentary teas, coffees and refreshments are unavailable at present, to avoid contamination

We reserve the right to ask clients to leave our stores, if they do not follow the advice of RCUK's team members.

REOPENING

Changes to your service inside RCUK's Retail Branches

Please be aware that we have made some changes to our protocols in these early stages of reopening our stores:

If you are returning a handset or a rented device, you may be asked to seal this in the returns bag supplied to you and complete the information label enclosed. Sealed bags will only be investigated after 72 hours

Our mobile device repair desk is currently closed so we are unable to offer a repairs service at this time

Whilst we are proud to offer extended opening hours until 8:00 PM on Tuesdays at both our London locations under regular circumstances, with the current restrictions, both Stamford Hill and Golders Green stores will be closing at 6:00 PM each Tuesday

All departments that make up the Rose Communications Group will continue to be fully operational throughout this time and we will do our utmost to maintain our outstanding service on an ongoing basis.

Our Mobile Team is available by calling 020 8815 4111 or by emailing mobile@rcuk.com and our Fixed Services Team is available by calling 020 8815 4115 or by emailing telecoms@alfonica.com. At this extremely difficult time, we are committed to maintaining the most comprehensive service possible.

We thank you for your understanding and wish those affected by the virus a speedy recovery.

Yours sincerely,

Maxi Rose

Your Questions Answered CORONAVIRUS Memo 12

Mrs Nechumelle Jacobs nee Berger is a young woman living in Schonfeld Square, Stamford Hill, who is wheelchair bound and has Cerebral Palsy. She has used this incredibly challenging time during lockdown to encourage herself and others by writing poems. 'Challenging Change' helps us understand that when we embrace and accept challenging times like the current pandemic, we can be 'H'achieve wonderful things. We are very proud to share this inspiring poem with you.

CHALLENGING CHANGE

Life is a challenge; I am the first to admit
But no matter what – I refuse to quit

I find it a struggle to leave my comfort zone
But if I hadn't I would still be single and alone

We can compare it to a hermit crab in a small shell
And as it grows - it needs to change to a larger one to dwell

It is frightening to venture out – with predators all around
But in his larger shell growth and tranquillity will be found

In order to survive we must constantly expand
Accepting others and ourselves to understand

Growth can be gradual; it is the effort that counts
We don't expect in one day, Everest to mount

Change takes effort and also time
With each day, we escalate the climb

So, take the plunge and continue to grow
Then achievement in both worlds you will sow.

GESHER SCHOOL

STAFF VACANCIES

Gesher is a unique Jewish Independent SEN Primary School that opened its doors in September 2017. Our cohort of children present with a range of Special Educational Needs, which include (but are not limited to) language, communication, and social pragmatic difficulties, as well as those needs associated with ADHD and specific learning difficulties. Additionally, Gesher specialises in accommodating for children who present with Autism Spectrum Challenges (ASC). Gesher follows an adapted, personalised curriculum that is therapy-based and supported by a multi-professional team. We are an incredibly passionate and hardworking staff body, who are dedicated to providing an OFSTED Outstanding SEN provision to the children and families we support. We currently have exciting professional opportunities for innovative and inspirational staff to join our team. If you would like an application form and full job descriptions, please visit www.gesherschool.com/vacancies or email admin@gesherschool.com.

Jewish Studies Teacher

GRADE: MPS + SEN ALLOWANCE | Full Time

Gesher is a Jewish faith school, and follows the principles that underpin Modern Orthodox Judaism. As such, we are looking to recruit an experienced Jewish Studies Teacher to join our team. A thorough and advanced knowledge of Judaism is required, whilst experience working with Special Educational Needs would be highly advantageous.

Speech and Language Therapist

Fixed Term Contract - Term Time Only

Gesher is looking for a part-time, qualified Speech & Language Therapist with knowledge of supporting children with Autism Spectrum Conditions (ASC), ADHD, and other specific learning needs. As a therapy-based school, we require a confident individual who will work with children aged 4-11 in both individual settings, as well as class based and small group sessions.

Occupational Therapist

Both Full Time (Term Time Only) & Part Time Vacancies

Gesher is looking for both a full-time and part-time qualified Occupational Therapists with knowledge of Autism Spectrum Conditions (ASC) as well as developmental delays, sensory needs and emotional regulation. As a therapy-based school, Gesher is seeking competent OTs who will work with children aged 4-11 in individual settings, as well as class based and small group sessions.

SEN Class Teacher

GRADE: MPS + SEN ALLOWANCE | Full Time

Gesher is seeking an outstanding and inspirational SEN Class Teacher and would like to join our incredible team. We are looking for exceptional candidates who have experience of teaching either KS1 and KS2 children, and are comfortable working with SEN children who display a range of difficulties related to ASC and other additional learning needs. Whilst experience working with Special Educational Needs is not a requirement, it would be advantageous.

SEN Teaching Assistant

Full Time

Gesher is looking to recruit competent teaching assistants to join our staff. Our TAs are highly valued and integral to our pupils' ongoing development. Working under the instruction and guidance of the teaching staff, TAs will be expected to implement agreed programmes of work in a 1:1 capacity, as well as in small groups. We are looking for caring, supporting, enthusiastic, innovative and proactive practitioners who will encourage our students to take pride in their learning and enjoy coming to school.

All posts start September 2020. Candidates do not need to be of a Jewish Faith, although, a respect of the Jewish Ethos and Values of the school is to be expected.

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

The technological whiz who can outsmart a bunch of dumb policemen and any geek you throw at me!" He gave a sly smile. "Not bad, eh, mixing classics and the world of high technology? Most classics men wouldn't know one end of a computer from another, and most people who sit in front of a computer screen all day and night wouldn't know a quote from Shakespeare if it jumped up and bit them. But I am the Fox. Possessor of all knowledge, always able to outsmart my enemies! Hahahaha!"

"Yes, but I figured you out, didn't I, Gabriel? I caught the Fox in his lair," Colin said sardonically. "So you weren't so clever after all, were you? I figured out where you'd be, and I came after you." Gabriel looked momentarily nonplused. Colin remembered learning somewhere that a true psychopath always believes he is more clever than his pursuers and can outsmart them. By pointing out that he hadn't, Colin managed to throw Gabriel off track.

"You don't have Josh," he said.

"Release the man now and put your hands on your head!" came a voice from a loudspeaker somewhere. Gabriel shook his head at the source of the voice.

"Sorry, mate, no can do. Gone too far to back out now, know what I mean?" He positioned himself cleverly now — behind a pillar with a thick square base so no snipers could pick him off from the galleries. He held the manager in front of him as a shield.

"Josh Hardman is dead!" Gabriel screamed at the policemen as they came toward him, and he laughed hysterically.

Then, from the back of the stage, a ghostly figure walked. Slow, deliberate steps. The tableau in front of him froze as he came into the floodlights.

He seemed to be made of cobwebs and rotting garments. His skin seemed as pale as death. He began to quote.

"I am thy father's spirit, doom'd for a certain time to walk the night, and for the day confined to fast in fires, till the foul crimes done in my days of nature are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid to tell the secrets of my prison house I could a tale unfold whose lightest word harrow up thy soul."

For a frozen moment, no one spoke. Then, "Hello, my son," said the specter.

Still holding the manager tightly, Gabriel took a step forward, peering incredulously at the apparition. His whole body shook with terror.

"Dad?"

"That's right, son. It's me," came the ghostly voice. "Your old dad. Aren't you glad to see me?"

"But...you're dead!"

"The dead come back to life when the occasion demands. To wreak vengeance."

"I saw you die!" Gabriel gibbered.

"That's because you pushed me. You pushed me off that bridge, Gabriel, into the swollen river, and you watched me being swept downstream until I died. You watched all of that."

"What are you doing here now?" Gabriel said shrilly, clutching the manager ever more tightly.

"I have come to wreak vengeance upon you. For my death, and for Josh Hardman, who never did you any harm."

"Don Hardman's father harmed you! His father snatched on you to the cops and you lost your job, and we all had to leave the country, sneaking away at night like thieves. I hated you for that, hated you for turning us into fugitives. But I hated Don Hardman's father even more for putting us there."

"He didn't put us there, son. I put us there by my stupidity and greed. Don's father just did what he had to do. He was my boss, after all."

"He could have kept quiet! He could have spoken to you or sacked you. He didn't have to report you! That's why I took Don Hardman's son. Payback time at last. I wanted him to suffer the way I suffered, being made to leave my home, my school, my country, and come to England. But you never quite made it here, did you, Dad? Fugitives we were and fugitives we remained. Always jumping at shadows, always looking over our shoulders. Well, I didn't want to live like that anymore."

"So you decided to kill me."

"Yes. And you're dead!" Gabriel screamed. He raised his rifle and pointed it.

The manager, squeaking and struggling like a pig, managed to slide down a bit so that his head wasn't in immediate line with his captor's. It was the only moment.

The apparition pulled out a .22 automatic pistol from his pocket, aimed, and fired. A neat hole appeared right in the center of Gabriel's forehead.

"Et tu, Brute," murmured Gabriel, and he folded up, like a puppet whose puppeteer had released its strings. He collapsed on the stage and lay on his side, eyes staring, sightless forever.

The manager stood there, crying like a baby. "He seemed like such a nice man," he sobbed.

The ghost stood, looking at his smoking barrel and the dead man on the stage. Colin came forward and peered at him incredulously.

"I found this costume upstairs, thought it might come in handy," Peter White told his superior officer, struggling to rid himself of the cobwebby clothes. "With all that was going on, no one noticed that I hadn't come downstairs with everyone else." He grinned at Colin. "Hey, aren't you impressed with my Shakespeare quotation? I crammed up on it the other night just in case."

Leora and Colin gawped in openmouthed admiration.

"Hidden talents. Mum always said I had hidden talents," Peter said modestly. Then he started to tremble from the shock of having taken another man's life, as the theater filled with police and paramedics. Sirens filled the night with sound as ambulances screeched to the front and ambulance men rushed in with stretchers. Colin patted Peter on the back and then turned to the paramedics.

"I'm going up. After all this, I want to be the one to go up."

Calmly he went back up to the attic and climbed the stepladder. He broke apart the wooden slats until there was a decent-sized opening and climbed in. Everyone waited with bated breath below.

The world waited. No one breathed.

Colin reappeared, carefully carrying a small, crumpled, silent figure. He climbed down the stepladder and laid him on the floor of the attic room. No one moved. Colin leaned closely toward the boy's still face, listening and feeling.

"He's breathing," Colin said.

Medics took over, and Josh was examined on the ground where they lay him. An oxygen mask was put over his face, and they wrapped him in a foil survival blanket.

"He's alive!" the medic said loudly so everyone could hear, and a cheer went up, a cheer that filled the whole theater. It was the standing ovation of all standing ovations. Everyone was rejoicing that Josh Hardman had been found alive.

Colin phoned the Hardmans from his cell phone. "He's alive. I think he'll be okay," he said. "He's being attended to now." He turned to the ambulance men. "Which hospital are you taking him to?"

"Royal Free, Hampstead."

Colin repeated it to the Hardmans. "Go there. You can join your son there soon."

A Dressed-up Satan

Rabbi Koby Levi received a phone call from a mother in a yishuv in the south of Eretz Yisrael, two days after Purim. She tearfully repeated this spine-tingling story.

"Rabbi Levi, I just returned my my daughter, Riki's* kever. She was killed in a car accident two days after Purim 5773. She was twenty years old and dreamed of marrying and building her own home. She was a talented girl, full of life, helpful, happy and successful.

"Riki was crossing a busy street that had no traffic light, when a speeding car hit her. (Recently, after another car accident there, traffic lights were installed.) Riki was killed immediately. I have still not overcome my feelings of shock and heartbreak. I feel as though I constantly see her before me.

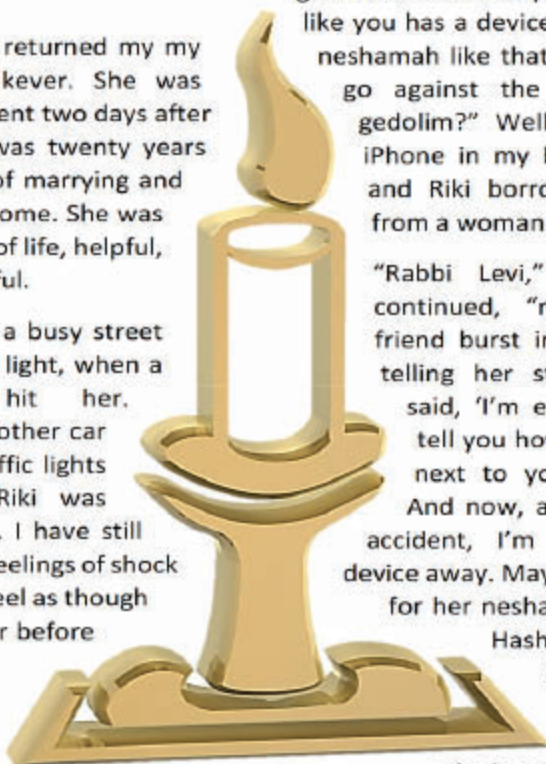

"During the shivah, a good friend of my daughter told us about the last time she'd seen Riki. She said, 'Two weeks ago, we sat down to eat in a public place. After Riki finished her sandwich, she groped around in her bag for her siddur to bentch from, but she couldn't find it. She turned her pocketbook upside down but her siddur had disappeared. I told her to calm down and offered my iPhone for her to bentch from. It has everything on it – tefillos, bakashos, Torah. Riki wasn't interested. "Chas v'shalom," she said. "I'm not touching it. It's like the Satan dressed up as a friendly grandfather. I'm surprised that a girl like you has a device that ruins the neshamah like that. How can you go against the psak of our gedolim?" Well, I buried my iPhone in my bag after that, and Riki borrowed a siddur from a woman nearby.'

"Rabbi Levi," the mother continued, "my daughter's friend burst into tears after telling her story, and she said, 'I'm embarrassed to tell you how terrible I felt next to your daughter... And now, after this awful accident, I'm throwing my device away. May it be an aliyah for her neshamah, and may Hashem bless my older sister with children in the merit of what I am doing. My sister has been married for six years already.'

"The girl threw her iPhone away and ten months later, her sister gave birth to a healthy son.

	8				4
	4		8		1		5
		3					2
				9			6
		5	3		4
6		4			9	3

Each puzzle consists of a 9x9 Sudoku grid containing areas surrounded by gray or dotted lines. The object is to fill all empty squares so that the numbers 1 to 9 appear exactly once in each row, column and 3x3 box, and the sum of the numbers in each area is equal to the clue in the area's top-left corner.
