The story behind Beis Yaakov

It all began in 2011. The kehilla had seen explosive growth in the past decade, with hundreds of children requiring placement in local schools each year.

The problem, of course, was space. So, a few enterprising askanim set about to provide a solution. They established Beis Yaakov Girls School – a school which caters to girls from the heimishe community and remains unaffiliated with any particular chassidus or sect.

In a relatively short time, Beis Yaakov Girls School solidly established itself as a school par excellence which encourages children to learn, engage fully with the world around them and develop positive personality traits.

BYGS is governed solely by parents who send their daughters to the school. This automatically results in a much more passionate and invested governing body who insist on the absolute best for the pupils and school itself. It also means that they have a constant finger, so to speak, on the pulse of the school.

At the same time, not a step is taken without consulting daas Torah. Rabbi Yosef Padwa shlit"a serves as the school Nasi, aided by his newly appointed Sgan, Rabbi Melech Schwartz shlit"a (Tchabe Rav) who heads the ruchnius Vaad.

A school is usually as good as its teachers; and indeed, when it comes to its amazing staff, BYGS has much to be proud of. Led by the exceptional Head, Mrs T Barwin, teachers are skilled and highly motivated, which results in a high learning standard as well as an energetic & pleasant school environment. Beis Yaakov heads work hard to encourage pupil excellence in both Kodesh and Chol studies, focusing both on academics and personal growth. This was reinforced by a recent Ofsted inspection which highlighted that the 'new Headteacher has a clear vision for the school which is shared by parents, staff and pupils'.

Success breeds its own unique challenges; since its inception 8 years ago, the school has been growing steadily, necessitating an urgent move to more spacious accommodation. With over 100 pupils, there simply wasn't enough space or equipment to allow optimal learning and play to take place. New premises were urgently needed – and after extensive efforts on behalf of the trustees and governors, this has finally become a reality.

At the start of the new term, the entire school body moved into its new premises on Amhurst Park. The building provides the perfect place for a thriving, growing school; full of pleasing aesthetics, with natural details and little extras to enhance the learning experience. The interim location is ideal for allowing children to thrive, grow and develop their potential in a healthy Torah atmosphere.

While BYGS is ever-growing, it is at present still a small close-knit school which enables the staff to offer that much extra attention to the pupils and ensure that each and every girl is engaged and stimulated. However, the downside of a running a small school is that the income is significantly lower with similar overheads to most larger school. That issue, coupled with the extremely high moving and renovation costs recently incurred for our temporary premises, as well as the expenses which we hope to incur when we Be'ezras Hashem move to a permanent location in the near future, have left BYGS with a huge deficit that we have no way of covering.

Therefore, we are running a two-day Charidy campaign on 24th and 25th of February, 2019 where every donation will be doubled. Please donate as much as you can to allow Beis Yaakov Girls School serve our community and continue its very vital work!

NEW! INDICATOR LIGHTS

Do you make use of your oven on Shabbos?

According to many Poskim, opening ovens, even those that have a so-called "Sabbath mode," can involve halachic problems.

Installing a FedTech indicator light will solve these issues*

Certified for Shabbos and Yom Tov use by KF - Federation Beis Din

Call 020 8202 2263 or email technology@federation.org.uk to check whether your oven model is suitable for installation of the indicator light, and to purchase the light.

The indicator light requires simple, non-invasive installation by a qualified electrician.

For more information see www.federation.org.uk/indicator-light/

*The indicator light signals when the oven is heating. Leading poskim advise that one open the door only when the oven is heating.

Some ovens have been designed in a way that makes them totally incompatible for Shabbos use. The indicator light will not help for these models.

DARK TAPESTRY

by Ruthie Pearlman

"And the middle-aged man who complained that he couldn't get onto the Internet. The two youngsters took him through all the jargon, which went way over his head, trying to reconfigure his modem strings and making sure he had his IP address correctly entered. When Ilana took over that call, she found out the customer didn't actually have a modem. They need to learn that not everyone has a handle on computers like they do. Well, they're learning now, thanks to Ilana." Don stopped, looking stricken. "I hope she'll get over this. Right now she can't do a thing in the office. She wanders around like a robot on autopilot."

"Can you give me a list of all your employees, their names and addresses?" Colin asked.

"Sure. I'll prepare it for you tonight. Can I e-mail it to you here?"

"E-mails have a strange connotation for us at the moment, don't they? But yes, of course. Go right ahead."

Ilana reappeared at that moment, carrying a cup of tea and looking calmer. "Sorry," she said, somewhat shamefacedly.

"Please don't apologize, Mrs. Hardman. Sit down and we'll explain what we have been discussing. Maybe you have some more input into this e-mail."

"Now I think I might be able to look at it without losing control," Ilana said, and she did indeed appear much calmer.

"It's this bit about revenge. Do you have any idea who might want to take revenge on you or your husband?"

"Absolutely not." There was a pause. "Well, none that I know of. One never knows for sure, does one. You can think people like you, and really they don't. People don't always say and do what they mean."

They looked at Ilana, not saying a word. She smiled enigmatically.

"Are you referring to anyone in particular, Mrs. Hardman?" Colin asked.

"Can't you see? Someone has taken my son. Someone who seems to know us. Otherwise, why would they want to take revenge on us? So I have to accept that the people I know and trust have turned on us. Someone has turned on us. I can't trust anyone until I find out who did this to us." She paused for a moment, staring into her cup of tea, then took a sip. "Suddenly I am seeing shadows where there were none before. I am suspicious of people I consider my friends. Maybe one of them took my baby. Maybe the person I smiled at in the street, maybe the shopkeeper I visit regularly. Maybe, maybe, maybe. I suspect everyone, trust no one. It's a horrid thing to feel."

"It's hardly likely that someone still around has Josh," Don pointed out gently. "The abductor is obviously with him."

"Not necessarily. Maybe they've got him hidden somewhere while they conduct an outwardly blameless life here in Golders Green. Maybe they have an accomplice to look after him while they smile at me as if butter wouldn't melt in their mouth. I'd rather he did have an accomplice. I hate the thought of my baby being left on his own while someone is pretending to be perfectly normal and smiling at me in the street."

"That's not likely," Colin said again. "It would take a huge amount of brazenness for an abductor to live a normal life while having a child hidden somewhere."

"Then it's easy," Ilana said brightly. "All we do is look around the community and see who's missing." She smiled brilliantly. "Case solved!"

Sha'arei Chessed. A unique area of Jerusalem, totally singular. One of the oldest neighborhoods in the new city, it had been originally built in 1910, a ramshackle hotchpotch of tumbledown shacks and houses, some with corrugated iron roofs and doors, some solidly built in the Arab style with thick stone walls and arched windows. It had become home to many great sages. Over the years, particularly in the last decade, Sha'arei Chessed's location, a mere ten minutes' walk from the center of town, had made it an attractive chunk of real estate for development. Slowly the ramshackle shacks were being replaced by elegant new townhouses and apartments, and now the area had a half-and-half look. Some of the streets had the look of a dormitory town — empty most of the year, full of life for the summer and Jewish holidays such as Pesach and Sukkos. Some locals were thinking of moving on.

In an apartment building on Ibn Shaprut Street, Avi Pincus sat, furiously working on his computer. He and his wife and four children had made aliyah recently and had their combined eye on a house a bit nearer to the shul called the Gra, but until Pincus earned enough money, it was way beyond their reach.

Avi was a skilled programmer and had nabbed himself a good job with a software company in Jerusalem, but despite working extra hours and taking work home, he was struggling to meet his everyday family commitments, never mind putting away some savings. The house in Sha'arei Chessed was looking as far away as ever.

Avi finished the program and sent it into the office via e-mail. He blessed the cheap Bezek rates that compared so favorably with British Telecom, and he blessed the fast service from his Net provider. It saved time and money, both of which were in short supply right now.

He sent off his work and downloaded whatever e-mail was waiting for him on the server. Among the work-related mail was one from the U.K. with an unfamiliar address. He scanned the work e-mail quickly to see if there was anything that urgently required his attention, then disconnected from the service and opened up the e-mail from England.

"Avi, we need your help here," it began.

As he read, his sense of shock and horror increased with each word. The Hardman kid missing? Abducted? Untraceable e-mails? His mind started to race. Quickly he typed a reply.

Please forward me the originals of the two e-mails exactly as the Hardmans received them, and any other they get, immediately. I think I know how this was accomplished, but I will need to study the letters.

He clicked Send and the letter vanished. Sitting in front of the computer, still logged in, his brain was whirring at warp speed. Then his fingers whizzed over the keyboard in a blur of movement, and he clicked Send again and the screen cleared. He disconnected and sat back, cracking his knuckles loudly. He sat there a few moments more, apparently inert, but everything inside was buzzing, circuits alight with thought. Then, with a sigh, he returned to his bread-and-butter work, the next piece of programming.

The e-mail he sent back to England was picked up, but not by who it was intended for. It was intercepted, read on the server, and deleted. The Fox absorbed the knowledge that somewhere out there was someone who was, brain for brain, a match for him.

Well, almost.

I have the kid. And as long as I have the kid, I have the upper hand.

Using a hacking program he had downloaded, he reentered the server he had used to read the mail. He forged a similar e-mail, using the same headers and return address. Then, leaving the mail on the server, he kicked over his traces. First he deleted the log files which registered his entry. Then he installed special programs that made him appear invisible. Satisfied, he logged out and left the system as if he had never been there.

The Internet Fox was gone.

PARDES DINNER

9TH FEBRUARY

A large gathering comprised of parents, supporters and admirers of North West London's longest established boys primary school, gathered at the Watford Hilton on Motzaei Shabbos for a memorable gala dinner.

Following 65 years of high quality Chinuch, the dinner held in aid of Pardes House Primary School had in attendance, founding and second generation pupils, who have benefitted from the vision of the school's great founder, the legendary Radomishler Rav, Rav Elchonon Halpern zt"l. Today the school is headed by a dynamic duo comprised of the Menahel, Rabbi Shmuel Roitenbarg and the head of Chof, Mr Joel Sager, both of whom have introduced innovative educational methods to respond to the needs of the current generation of talmidim, which ka"n numbers 385 precious children.

The evening was chaired by Mr Yair Emanuel, who introduced the Chairman of Governors Mr Andrew Sprung. Mr Sprung commended the tireless efforts of the school heads in ensuring the high quality of Kodesh and Chof education in a warm and welcoming atmosphere and spoke of how well the parents have responded to their responsibility to take part in the Chinuch of their children. Mr Sprung made mention of the various divisions of the school, including the Special needs department, all of which are run in an exemplary manner and also thanked the dinner committee for all their efforts in making the evening such a success.

A presentation was made to Mr Sager in recognition of the professionalism and commitment with which he runs the school, whilst being in tune with the needs of each student. Mr Sager's exemplary educational leadership has been noticed by other schools, the local authority and Ofsted who visited the school a few weeks ago and left most impressed. In response, the head of Chof praised the good balance of Kodesh and Chof and the atmosphere of respect which is promoted by the staff together with the support of the governors. Following Mr Sager's address, and a music video about the school, international music celebrity Benny Friedman enthralled the audience with heart-warming niggunim. At the conclusion of his introductory performance, the singer was accompanied by the 3 winners of the school contest to sing a special song in honour of the school's 65 years. Singing to the tune of Vezakeini Legadel, Dov Klein, Yoni Vorhand and Eliyohu Segal were joined by Benny in uplifting the assembled with the soul-stirring melody.

The dinner was also in honour of thirty years of devotion to Pardes by Rebbe Freilich, the beloved Rebbe of the early years. Mr Sprung made a presentation and thanked him for infusing the boys with a love for learning from Alef Beis upwards with an enthusiasm that does not diminish with time.

The Menahel Rebbe Roitenbarg offered words of thanks for the support of the rebbes, teachers, governors and parent body and made mention of the new Loshon Hakodesh initiative recently rolled out in the school which has been widely accepted as a huge success.

The highlight of the dinner was the keynote address delivered by the renowned Mechanech Rabbi Yitzchok Weitz. Rabbi Weitz, who is the Menahel of Beis Yaakov Primary School is highly regarded in the chinuch scene and his guidance was eagerly absorbed by the enthusiastic listeners. He discussed the new challenges of Chinuch in our generation, and how now is the best time to invest as much time and effort as possible in our young kids, as this will certainly save us a lot of time and effort when these kids are adolescent. The best investment for your kids should be in the form of TLC – Time, Learning, Communication. Invest Time and focus in your children while they are still young, and this will save a lot of time when your kids are grown up teenagers. Learn the best ways to deal with your kids. Nobody should feel ashamed or embarrassed to ask for advice how to deal with their kids. We can all be inspired how to be the best parents for our children. Communication is key to having a great relationship with your kids. Every word spoken with our child while they are still in school is the answer to ten questions when they are in Yeshiva Ketanah and one hundred tough conversations when they are in Yeshiva Gedola.

Following the masterful talk by Rabbi Weitz, Benny Friedman further entertained with a vintage medley of Yigal Calek's masterpieces amongst many other beautiful songs. Enjoying the kumzits style singing until after midnight, the dinner guests left uplifted and satisfied with the knowledge that they had been able to show hakoras hatov to the school which has infused thousands of talmidim with a love for Torah and high academic success for sixty-five years.

The school would like to thank the Kehilla for all their generous support towards the dinner and all year round.
